24. [US officers get reports]
25. [US in camp, unprepared]
26. [Wildlife on the move?]
27. [Wide shot of Rebels army attacking camp, rebel yell, yanks fall back and back]
28. [Other Rebels attack]
29. [Jackson and staff move through woods]
30. A staff officer shouted to them, "Don't shoot, boys it is Gen. Jackson!" The Rebels shouted back, "Its' a lie, that's Yankee cavalry! Pour it into 'em, boys!", The rebels poured a volley into their own leader. Jackson was hit twice in the left arm and once in the right hand. The commotion attracted the attention of some union artillerymen that began dropping shells in the area.

31. [The General on a stretcher] Jackson's men fashioned a stretcher and put the general on it. But with explosions all around and stumbling in the dark woods, his men dropped him onto his wounded arm. No one had ever heard Jackson complain about anything before, but on being dropped he groaned aloud.
32. When Lee heard of the accident, he said, "Jackson has lost his left arm, but I have lost my right."
33. [US general giving orders]
34. [US attacks fortified Rebels, pull back, pull back again, and then take the hill genuine bayonet charge.]

36. [Idle Union troops, standing in line waiting for orders]
37. [US troops, not in battle, pull back]
38. [Cannon blasts the doorway, general stunned]
39. [Southern troops laying down, refusing to move.] Successful as it was, the southern attack bogged down in a few places. Confederate General, Sam McGowan's South Carolina brigade, exhausted, out of ammunition and horrified at the thought of further combat, refused to advance against the Yankees. After repeated pleading and plodding and threats to no avail, the Stonewall Jackson brigade marched over and through them and continued the attack.
40. [CS officers get alarming reports from a breathless courier]
41. [CS double quick march by]
42. [US hold their ground, fights off attacks]
43. US Gen. Sedgwick held off the attackers but got orders to pull back across the river, when he heard that Hooker had ordered a general retreat.
